- c. New course: EDCP 012 Education and Career Planning
Motion: N Davis/ V Neykov
That Education Council approves the new course: EDCP 012 Education and Career Planning as recommended by the CPRC – AFP:
- N Befus noted the course was developed by the College of the Rockies and was presented at articulation a year ago. It is an open source course and will count towards an adult Dogwood. Many students are looking for guidance with education planning and career planning and this course will help prepare them.
- A member questioned the rationale behind the English corequisite. N Befus explained that students will be learning communication skills and will need some guidance with writing. The math corequisite is there to aid students in the financial planning, budgeting, and wages portion of the course. The corequisites denote a higher level of thinking. The member noted that having the corequisites assumes students will be taking at least three courses. N Befus advised that students could go into the course already having the English and math corequisites. The member questioned if there would be a demand for this as a stand alone course. N Befus admitted that the department did not discuss this, but it is an interesting point. C Newitt noted that having those corequisites does not enable students from taking the course. He did not see this as overly onerous. The member agreed that seeing as the course counted toward the adult Dogwood, it can be assumed that students would be taking other courses as well.

- A member questioned if ,this would effect graduation dates. A Hay advised that it would not. The key with this proposal is that the semester will still end in April so students will not be disadvantaged. There is still a dialogue occurring between deans and departments. Most are in favour of the proposal. The Math department questioned if reading week would be able to change as well. This is not possible as reading week is tied in with BC Family Day.
